(soft string instrument music playing. This music plays throughout the video)	Black quickly fading into image of a man
(John Wagner – Wings Financial Foundation President) The Wings financial foundation; Maybe you've heard the name, but what exactly is it?	A man, John, standing center on screen with an office behind him
(Trysh Olson) Good question.	A woman, Trysh, standing center screen with a blurred background
(Trysh Olson - Education and Youth Programs Manager) The mission of the Wings Financial Foundation...	A still image of the Wings Financial Foundation logo on a wall
(Trysh Olson) ...is to empower individuals in the communities we serve through education and support in times of need.	Trysh standing center screen with a blurred background
(John Wagner) All across this country, too many people struggle to move forward and live their best lives.	John standing center on screen with an office behind him
(Trysh Olson) The foundation works to counteract these struggles...	Trysh standing center screen with a blurred background
(Trysh Olson) ...with three specific pillars of focus.	A wall with posters showing images highlighting the three pillars and various images of community members.
(John Wagner) All driving to help everyone in the community become financial empowered...	A continuation of the same posters
(John Wagner) ...and individually supported	John standing center on screen with an office behind him
(Trysh Olson) The first pillar, financial literacy. Improving financial literacy in people of all ages is a cornerstone of the foundation's existence.	A sign that says Financial Education, then cutting to individual images of students in financial literacy classes.
(John Wagner) From online and in-person education courses, to guidance for any financial situation, we help develop the ABCs of financial empowerment.	Images of students in financial classes, ending on an image of John on center camera speaking.
(Trysh Olson) Because people with the knowledge and ability to make sound decisions and make the most of the money they have are more likely to thrive.	Trysh standing center screen with a blurred background
(John Wagner) The second pillar is nutritional needs. Food is a basic necessity of life. Many families require assistance at some point in their lives, and having access to healthy food can provide for a longer, healthier existence.	Start with camera centered on John Wagner speaking, and then switches to images of children and families eating healthy food such as fruits.
(Trysh Olson) The foundation supports organizations that provide options for food	Images of people collecting and donating large amounts of food.

security through food banks or other resources to provide affordable, quality nutrition options for whoever needs it.
(John Wagner) Pillar number three is our community itself. Whether it be a natural disaster, an economic or social unrest, scholarship opportunities, or simply a new playground at a local park. We're hear to financially support our community whenever it needs it most, because this is our home.	An image of a poster that says, "Community" on it and then transitions to John speaking on center camera. Images of playgrounds and financial donations to community charities shown.
(Trysh Olson) And every member of this community is part of who we are	Trysh centered on screen speaking
(John Wagner) And that's a high level of the Wing's Financial Foundation. Of course, it's impossible to represent everything it truly encompasses in one short video.	John centered on screen speaking.
